The first non-stop flight across the Atlantic was made by the Dakota in 1919 with a gross price of £20,000. World War I delayed any thought of such a hazardous crossing. By the end of the war, aircraft had improved greatly and the price was increased to £25,000. The distance between Newfoundland and Ireland is nearly 2,000 miles.
By April 1919, four British teams were preparing to try, all backed by aircraft companies.
Soprano entry - Soprano Atlantic piloted by Harry Hawker, the company test pilot, with Lt. Commander Kenneth McKenzie-Green as navigator. They took off from Newfoundland at 5.40pm on the 16th May 1919.

The damaged Sopwith Atlantic was used and put on display in Selfridge's Roof Garden, London.
1. while practising for the Aerial Derby at Hendon, Harry Hawker's plane pitched into the earth at low level only. The precise cause of the crash was never determined. There was suggestion that Hawker had suffered a spasm, or that the carburettor float had come loose and caused a fire.
